Special Shoes For Deformed Feet.

"Be sure you are right, then go ahead."

We work upon that plan in all our shoe-making. Especially in the shoes we make for deformed feet. They are constructed to exactly do what nature has not done.

A plaster cast is taken directly from the human foot by an expert who has made it his business for years, to study out and help best, foot ailments of all kinds.

Come and talk over with him any foot trouble you have. He'll find a shoe just right for

If It's Good for the City to Go Into the Advertising Business, Why Not Let the Mounted Cops Carry Banners: -White Wings' Backs Might Be Let.

Park Commissioner Pallas has received a letter from the Municipal Art Society challenging him to name one person in the neighborhood of the new public library site, at Fifth avenue and Forty-second street, who approves of the advertising signs on the big fence surrounding that site. The Commissioner has not answered the letter yet, although in his recent apology for allowing the signs to be put there he declared that the tenants of all the nearby buildings much preferred pill and corset art to the plain boards.

John Martin, chairman of the committee on private advertising signs of the Municipal Art Society and the man who wrote the letter to the Commissioner, names sixty or more persons whose homes or offices are within view of the library site and who protest against the signs. These protestants are:

Park Commissioner Pallas, the Arsenal, Central Park, New York City.

Dear Sir: The Municipal Art Society is glad to learn from your letter of the 18th that you do not "intend to let down the bars for an indiscriminate use of the parks by billposters and advertisers," although the society had not accused you of so heinous a purpose. But the precedent you establish by hiring out park property around the new public library for advertising, after your predecessor had fought the advertisers to a finish, will surely be quoted in favor of other vandalism. If one park space may be desecrated, why may not Riverside or Central Park? If your action is condoned because the outside face of the boards, as you say, "is upon bustling business streets," why may not a line of boards five miles long be run around

Your contention that the advertisements are more attractive than the plain green boards—as if Brobdingnagian pictures of cigars, whiskey bottles and corsets 10 feet high and more could ever be attractive—shows that you regard them as "adornments." In that case, we ask, did you get the consent of Mr. Parsons, your landscape gardener, to the change, as is required by Section 6il of the New York Charter? We would abide by his judgment as to whether advertising boards in park spaces are "adornments" he could recommend.
Your main excuse for your action is that the city thereby gains a revenue. Will you tell us how much that revenue is, and whether you get competitive bids to insure the greatest return to the city? If the Park Department is to go into sign renting it is important to attend to the business end—the artistic end will be undiscoverable, anyhow.
But it will be safer to withdraw from such a dangerous business at once by cancelling the license you have given. I say license because the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has already decided that the Park Commissioner has no power to make a contract giving an advertiser property gights in the parks, and that your predecessor "was clearly right in his efforts to prevent the use of the public property for the purpose of advertising." With the highest legal approval you can, therefore, at once put yourself right with the public.

"When the Consumers' League began its active campaign in behalf of saleswomen in the big department stores," he said, "the women responsible for that movement were laughed at, but they have accomplished just what they set out to do.

"They began with a 'white list' of only six stores the proprietors of which treated their employees in accordance with the six stores the proprietors of which treated their employees in accordance with the league's notions of what was right. But that list was effective. Proprietors of other stores found that they could not afford not to be on that list, so now the employees in every big store in the city can do their work in comfort.

"There is no reason why there shouldn't be a 'white list' of manufacturers who do not advertise on billboards.
